

GREAT IS NEW YORK PLAN

Madison Square Garden to Be Succeeded by Olympia on Manhattan Field.

THREE TIMES ITS SIZE

Destruction of Old Resort
Makes Erection of New
One a Necessity.

BY RALPH JOHNSTON.

By Leased Wire to The Tribune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The news of the early passing of Madison Square Garden is the cause of genuine regret. Outside of Coney Island there is probably no better-known place within the corporate limits of Greater New York. There are many few New Yorkers who have not been among its patrons, either at the circus, athletic meets, the various shows, the political meetings, the races and the numerous other purposes to which the giant auditorium has been put during its career.

Like all else, however, the garden has been compelled to give way to the demands of business. New York is not much of a place for sentiment of the kind which will hold an old landmark which has ceased to be profitable merely for the sake of old associations, and the garden didn't pay.

New York needs a place where great crowds can gather and will not be long without one. In fact, there is a story current that the city is to have a covered amphitheater three times as big as Madison Square Garden. If the present plans of the Cogan estate are fulfilled, the amphitheater, to be called the Olympia, will be erected on old Manhattan field, adjoining the polo grounds.

Manhattan field is at the terminus of the Sixth and Ninth avenue elevated roads at One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street. It was a famous place for old intercollegiate baseball and football contests and staged many a championship contest. After the tearing down of Madison Square Garden some large place must be found for horse shows, circuses and the like, and it is believed that such a place should not be located down town again, where the zone of pleasure-loving population changes rapidly.

Morgan Gives Use of Yacht.
J. Pierpont Morgan, with his usual public spirit has come to the rescue of the board of twenty-five experts retained to investigate the complaint that the sewage of the Passaic valley is so polluting the waters of New York bay as to become a menace to the health of the city.

The steam yacht Nirvana, owned by Edward Hatch, Jr., of this city was tendered for the use of the scientists, but she broke down. It will take several weeks to make the repairs, and so J. Pierpont Morgan, who is a member of the harbor anti-pollution committee, has tendered his yacht Corsair.

The scientists will therefore do their work with what is perhaps one of the finest and most magnificent fitted up yachts in the world.

Alabama Favors Champ Clark.
When the name of Alabama is called in the Democratic national convention next year it is my guess that the vote of the delegation will be cast for Champ Clark," said H. B. Dunbar, formerly proprietor of the Gibson house of Cincinnati, but now of Alabama. "I spent four months in Alabama, and the consensus of political opinions expressed to me has favored the nomination of the speaker. There is some discussion favorable to Governor Wilson, and a few have mentioned Governor Harmon, but the majority of the people, and especially the politicians, have been for the nomination of the Missourian. I believe this same sentiment exists in other states of the south."

"Alabama is experiencing a marked revival of business," added Mr. Dunbar, "and in my opinion it is due in a large measure to the reaction against the drastic anti-liquor laws. Birmingham was the latest city to cast its vote against prohibition. In Mobile the opening of the saloons had almost an immediate effect on the business situation. One could see the difference the day after Mobile had voted to open the saloons. The saloons who have been going outside the state for periodical trips now remain at home, and the consequence is that Alabama is getting the benefit instead of other states. I believe that the movement in Alabama against the rigid prohibition laws marks the beginning of a general reaction, and that inside of a year or two the entire south will have removed from the statute books the unpopular laws that have driven money away from home."

Call Prohibition a Folly.
"The folly of state-wide prohibition has no better illustration than in Bristol, Tenn.," remarked William L. Bevins of that place, who is a native of Bristol, Tenn. "Bristol is directly opposite Bristol, Va., only the width of a street separating the two cities. In the past, the dry territory of Tennessee from the wet territory of Virginia."

"It is a daily occurrence for passengers on trains passing through Bristol to drop off the cars and hike straight for the saloons of Bristol, Va., which, as I have explained, are but a few steps from the Tennessee line. We all know that in the large cities of Tennessee there has been really no enforcement of the prohibition law, although I am told, there has been an attempt to close the bars in Chattanooga, where, as in other large cities, they have been wide open, despite the law."

"The result of all this has been that the old Dominion has been getting ahead while all the time its arid sister across the street has been sinking back. There is a commercial enterprise and growth in one, while the other barely holds its own. In the live town—I mean Bristol, Va.—there has been built recently a fine hotel that would be a credit to Washington, but I fear it will be many a year before we have one like it on the other side."

Invite Americans to Australia.
"Of all the nations of the world, Australia would prefer to get her immigrants from the United States," says John Bartlett of Sydney, New South Wales. "Since coming to America I have been in contact with more and more with the likeness of the Americans and Australians. We have the greatest loyalty for Great Britain, our mother country, but the English are not so much our kin as the Americans; that is, they are not so much of the same temperament and of the same country. We want American immigration."

Australia is a rapidly growing country, where there are greater opportunities offered for fortune building than in any other part of the globe.

"Our climate, I think, just suits Americans. We have various conditions of temperature—that is, the tropics in some parts and the temperate zone in the other sections. The mercury, however, never falls below 50 degrees, and by my fifty-five years of residence there I have never seen it snow. I have never felt the touch of snow in my hands. It is true that snow falls in the mountains and melting, it furnishes many parts of Australia with water for irrigation purposes."

"It has been told me that some American woolgrowers contend that Australia does not produce the finest wool in the world. I do not believe them. The Australian merino is a sure thing that manufacturers of woolen goods in Europe insist that their finer grades of cloth must contain a liberal percentage of Australian merino wool, and I am inclined to believe that the better grades of Australian wool. I do not know that the number of American buyers of wool in our Australian markets has increased considerably in the last few years."
